

Page/Acorn Engineering Scholarship

BACKGROUND

Pat Page established the Page/Acorn Engineering scholarships in 2008, in memory of her husband Bob. Robert (Bob) Page was a marine engineer spending many years at sea working his way up through the ranks, but when he planted his sea legs firmly on land, he became the co-founder of Page & Macrae Engineering, in 1953. He was a highly respected businessman who was responsible for a variety of projects in the Bay of Plenty, including the Ruahihi Power Station and the giant tanks at the Port. Bob Page was 'one of life's true gentlemen' with a heart to help young people get a start in life. He was passionate about seeing young people succeed in life.

Bob took on many apprentices and was keen to support the apprenticeship training scheme.

At the time Pat Page set up the Page/Acorn scholarships she said: "For many years my husband Bob was on the apprenticeship board. One day he came home, not his usual self but a very saddened man. I poured him a whisky and asked what was wrong. He told me that the apprenticeship scheme had come to an end, which I believe was a government move. Then Bob said "The tragedy is that in a few years' time there will be a dreadful shortage of builders, plumbers, electricians, fitters and turners, engineers and many other trades people, who have had the luxury of an apprenticeship.

Bob had a dream which we have now made happen with the guidance and considerable support I have received from John Donald and Bill Holland (my Trustees) and the Acorn Foundation. It gives me great pleasure to bring Bob's dream to life, in being able to present these scholarships to assist the successful candidates in their chosen careers.

To all of you – live your dream – take the hard knocks (and they will happen) – work hard – be proud of yourselves and always look ahead. You will succeed.

You are Kiwis and New Zealand needs you, now as never before."
